An Archive of Disappearance

Sankt Marx Areal

The skate park at St. Marx is more than concrete and ramps — it’s an urban commons. Walls covered in tags, graffiti, and signs of belonging tell the story of a space shaped collectively. Each mark is small, but together they form a place. Informal, communal, never owned. Now the site faces demolition.

“Common Tags” is our way of preserving it. We document the markings, digitize them, and create an archive of the community that made this space their own. Not out of nostalgia, but as recognition: it existed. And it mattered.
